

Transcending Sovereignty: Enforcement of Annulled International Arbitration Awards

The panel will discuss the competing views concerning the enforceability of international arbitration awards that have been annulled by a court at the seat of arbitration. Are awards truly transnational instruments that may, under applicable conventions governing enforcement, be enforced abroad even where they have been set aside by a court with presumably supervisory authority? Or are awards subject to the sovereignty of those supervisory courts? Different countries take different views, and the panelists will exchange and explain those views with an eye toward determining which approach better facilitates international dispute resolution.
